

COVID-19

Join the mailing list to receive daily email updates. Join now to

Sections Search

NATIONAL POST

Subscribe

News Politics Full Comment Post Picks Financial Post Healthing Driving The GrowthOp Videos
Podcasts E-PaperNews / Canada

Artwork, pandemic law and politics: Ontario universities to include COVID-19 courses in fall curriculum

Sova, an instructor at OCAD University in Toronto, said art was her only remedy as the world became more distant and uncertain times emerged

The Canadian Press
Osobe Waberi

Aug 30, 2020 • Last Updated 1 month ago • 3 minute read

Ada Slaight Chair of Contemporary Drawing and Painting at OCAD University Ilene Sova poses for a photo behind the university, which will remain closed and transition to online classes in September, in Toronto, Saturday, Aug. 29, 2020. PHOTO BY GALIT RODAN /THE CANADIAN PRESS

TRENDING

1 Sean Speer: The U.S. presidential debate reminds us that decline is a choice

with Video

2 'You're the worst president America has ever had': Donald Trump and Joe Biden clash in chaotic debate

with Video

3 John Ivison: It's becoming impossible to tell Liberals and New Democrats apart, and the implications are unsettling

with Video

4 'I'm so depressed': Sikh priest claims phoney-temple immigration scam in B.C. left his family destitute

5 Ontario could soon hit 1,000 new infections per day, COVID-19 models predict

Back in early March, as Ontario's colleges and universities scrambled to prepare for government shut-down orders amid the COVID-19 pandemic, Ilene Sova packed up as many art supplies as she could in anticipation of the months of isolation that would follow.

Sova, an instructor at OCAD University in Toronto, said art was her only remedy as the world became more distant and uncertain times emerged.

She would later turn her home office into a makeshift art studio and begin her creative process, but one thing she could not shake off was the thought of her students going through similar emotions.

“While I was making collages one day in early April, I realized that our students might also want to make art about this unprecedented time, and may also benefit from responding creatively,” Sova said in an interview.

That’s when the idea to create a course in relation to the COVID-19 pandemic was born, and Sova approached the school with her plans.

The course, titled “COVID-19 Responsive Art,” will prompt students to look into their own artwork in response to how the pandemic is affecting their personal lives — and explore how historical and contemporary artists have responded to similar crises in the past.

MORE ON THIS TOPIC

Face masks and screens: What a return to school looks like around the world, in pictures

“My own experience tells me that making art during this time and expressing myself is extremely healing,” said Sova. “Finding commonalities in this class and hearing each other’s stories will be so invaluable in easing the dark times that they are facing together.”

Sova is among many Ontario university instructors gearing up to offer students courses revolving around the COVID-19 pandemic this upcoming school year.

Nathalie Desrosiers, president of the University of Toronto’s Massey College, said in the fall she will be teaching “The Time of Pandemics” to a fourth-year seminar class.

teaching “The Law of Pandemics” to a fourth-year seminar class.

Students will have the opportunity to look at the many consequences that have been highlighted in society due to the pandemic, Desrosiers said.

“We look at the different impacts of the pandemic on different groups in racialized communities, women, people with disabilities,” she said. “The end goal is for students to use the pandemic and their own experience to explore what are the consequences to the legal system.”

Padmaja Rengamannar, a third-year journalism and political science student at U of T, said it amazed her how she was able to learn about a time that will “undoubtedly be recorded in historical documents” while taking online courses this summer on the implications of the pandemic on international law.

“

Finding commonalities in this class and hearing each other's stories will be so invaluable in easing the dark times that they are facing together

“We discussed the lack of accountability from several nations with regards to mishandling the virus and the lack of enforcement to hold such nations responsible,” Rengamannar said. “The lecture made me think about the different actors, like states and their governing leaders, involved in the pandemic.”

Olabanji Akinola, assistant professor of political science at Algoma University, said he is teaching a course called “Law and Politics of the COVID Pandemic” that will examine the legal and political aspects of the health crisis.

“Students will be able to learn about ... the various legal and political frameworks and governance systems for dealing with the pandemic, the history of pandemics generally and COVID in particular,” Akinola said.

Ahmad Firas Khalid, political science instructor at McMaster University, said he is teaching a course called “Politics of Pandemics” where students can expect to learn about the impact and influence of global health governance.

“Students will come to understand the types of decisions that can have an impact on health, the roles of different organizations involved in making these decisions, and the types of influences on these decisions,” he said.

Posted Newsletter

Sign up to receive the daily top stories from the National Post, a division of Postmedia Network Inc.

Email Address

Sign Up

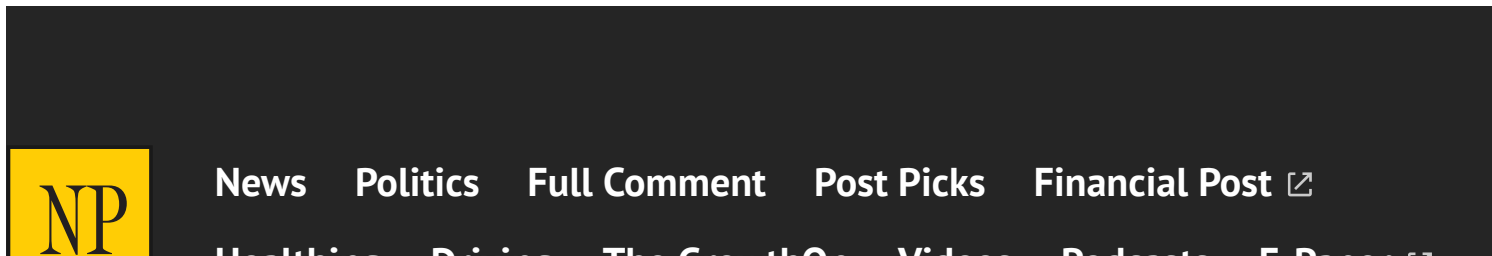

By clicking on the sign up button you consent to receive the above newsletter from Postmedia Network Inc. You may unsubscribe any time by clicking on the unsubscribe link at the bottom of our emails. Postmedia Network Inc. | 365 Bloor Street East, Toronto, Ontario, M4W 3L4 | 416-383-2300

TRENDING

THIS WEEK IN FLYERS

COMMENTS

Postmedia is committed to maintaining a lively but civil forum for discussion and encourage all readers to share their views on our articles. Comments may take up to an hour for moderation before appearing on the site. We ask you to keep your comments relevant and respectful. We have enabled email notifications—you will now receive an email if you receive a reply to your comment, there is an update to a comment thread you follow or if a user you follow comments. Visit our Community Guidelines for more information and details on how to adjust your email settings.

My Account

Subscriber Self-Serve
ePaper
Contact Us

Advertise

Partnerships
Appointment Notice
Advertise
Resources
Content Works

Postmedia Network

Financial Post
Regina Leader-Post
Saskatoon StarPhoenix
Windsor Star
Ottawa Citizen
Winnipeg Sun
London Free Press
Canada.com
Canoe.com

Classified

Remembering
Celebrating
Classifieds Marketplace
Careers
FlyerCity
Post a Classified ad
Local Directory

Sales

About Us

Driving.ca
The Province
Vancouver Sun
Edmonton Journal
Calgary Herald
Montreal Gazette
Toronto Sun
Ottawa Sun
Calgary Sun
Edmonton Sun

Follow us

Give us some feedback!

 POSTMEDIA

365 Bloor Street East, Toronto, Ontario, M4W 3L4

© 2020 National Post, a division of Postmedia Network Inc. All rights reserved. Unauthorized distribution, transmission or republication strictly prohibited.

Privacy - Updated Terms Copyright Digital Ad Registry

Sitemap Contact us